

Plato Academy: Room 9

Classroom Journal: Special Visitor, Jouets! Store, Accountability

3/16.2018

I enjoyed meeting with all of you! Since you are recently updated on all of our project work enjoy reading a brief journal on our week.

Moment of celebration of Room 9 kiddos! As all Plato teachers work hard to get ready for conferences (anecdotes, report cards, etc.) in Room 9, the children also work hard to prepare for their conferences. The days leading up to conferences they cleaned their cubbies, organized their journals, and wrote honest letters to each of you reflecting on their successes and well as their goals. They decided which work of theirs was to be presented and by doing so, demonstrated accountability for all of their hard work and growth this quarter. Some chose to “edit” their work checking for capital letters, punctuation, and our favorite “grammar” reference “their, there, or they’re”. I am so proud of them!

Mr. Vogdanos joined our class Thursday afternoon for an introduction to drawing/sketching, and gave each child a step by step book of different shapes to make to create drawings of different animals. The children really enjoyed this and are excited to incorporate in their sketchbooks. Thank you Mr. Vogdanos!

Mural work is still going. The children are very meticulous in their work for the mural and are working hard to assure accuracy and relation to the book and our Georges Melies study. They are mostly using paint, cardboard, and recently added steel works for mechanical toys. Our goal is to have our mural finished before spring break.

Happy St. Patrick's Day! (Don't forget to practice reading lyrics for our Aladdin medley!)

Warmly,
Ms. Bia & Mr. Foti
