Dear Room 6 Parents,

Is it just me or did this past week fly by?? Please see below for a few highlights from the week.

- On Monday we were very excited to see that Cornflake had shed his skin! Last week, we had made predictions of when this might happen so it was a great surprise to find this change in the morning. We journaled about which day over the weekend we thought he might have shed and why we thought that.

- On Monday and Tuesday we met with our buddies again! This time we used dice and found strategies to count the dots as quickly as possible. We will continue this discovery next week as we identify each strategy used such as repeated addition, multiplication, making equal groups, etc. As we discuss and breakdown each strategy, we build the understanding of multiplication.

- Next month is National Poetry Month. Throughout the week we have explored poems through one of our Monarch books, Haikus, and other poems about seasons. Your students are excellent poets! They have done a great job being open to analyze poems openly and honestly; they have clapped out rhythm and syllables; and some have even chosen poetry books during our library visit this week!

- Thursday was St. Baldrick's Day and it was excellent! The stories told by the cancer survivors were incredibly inspiring. As a school, we raised over $15,000! We were so proud of the five shavees in our own classroom :)

- On Friday we had a visit from the Hellenic Museum. We told the stories of Jason & the Argonauts, Theseus & the Minotaur, and Bouboulina. We then created some of our own ships. We have had so much fun learning from the Hellenic Museum over the past few months. I hope your kids have come home after each visit from the museum and shared with you all that they have learned about Greek history, mythology, and legends.
